Martin Bartlam

Partner
DLA Piper

Martin Bartlam heads the UK Finance Practice at DLA Piper and is heavily involved in the FinTech sector advising participants in the sector ranging from start-ups to some of the largest financial institutions on their FinTech products and strategy. Examples include working with RBS on establishing their ground breaking automated treasury services platform for on line derivatives services and working with a number of banks on their electronic platform offerings.

Martin also works with new entrants and alternative credit providers on the establishment and funding of on-line platforms and has been actively involved with funding programmes for a number of companies in this space including Euroloan Group, Future Finance and BlueZest Capital. Martin is at the forefront of working with companies developing blockchain technologies such as Luther Systems and is developing protocols for blockchain based product that can be applied across the wider finance market.

In the context of his role at DLA Piper, Martin is a member of the technology group looking at the development of technology in legal services and is participating in the use of intelligent software such as Kira to streamline portfolio analysis and due diligence as well as the application of new technologies to provide greater efficiencies in the delivery of legal services.
